They watch and wonder now and then
at change
and sometimes think of when the place was barren;

then,
before the structured, glistening homes of books and thoughts, grew up to meet the welcome tread and pulse of those who wander.

They find themselves in the activities
surrounding them:

there are times of fun and of joy mixed with the necessary times when hello's must be said and smiles given
often too often
Shadows of people doing, and some of those shadows having faces.

ustees

Alton H. Glasure, Vice President

They know that somewhere lost
behind the doors
which have important
names
are those who care
in their own way—
unseen, sometimes
unknown.

Some of those faces are looked at more than they look,

Lawrence Winn, Men's Dormitory Council

and for the others those some lead,
judge,
regulate,
and create.

H. A. Peralta, Jr., Incite

There are others
at this place,
perhaps unseen,
important to the pruning
and the growth,
who fill a need that only people
can:

they work and some become our friends.

All the faces sharing the task of the work of the books
and those times of
no books,
when being
alone is enough and
thoughts
are more close than the skin upon their bodies.

They work
and then the moments of relief.
Instants shared with someone else,
a friend
perhaps.

A smile,
a laugh,
a look of surprise,
enjoyment
expressed on a
face:
reflections of people
being themselves.

At times they need to be
alone,
to know the sounds of words unspoken,

to feel the thoughts of time too close to reach expression
the symbols of silence
together.

This place is not only a
place
where there are books, and papers, and men
who stand in front of rooms and talk;

it is a place of meeting, of confrontation, of community, and of loneliness.

It is a place where they come and begin to learn and to have things happen
that will be remembered.

The reality of the drama can sometimes
give meaning
to the dramatic reality we live in.
Noah, Santa Claus,
Antigone, Abraham and Isaac brought this place
insights and
thoughts.
The first year of full-time production activity
stimulated,
shocked, and
impressed:
many times there is more real to the unreal than to the real.

The clubs of this place brought moments away from activities of schedules.
They laughed at professors mocking themselves and at imitations of other people from other places . . .
Shadows still playing in lights of a Fiesta and Mardi Gras.

There are more moments when faces known not only to this place appear and are seen.
They move their feet and hold their ears open,
quietly and loud,
for the man and his horn or the Canadians.

For some, sailing provides a form to shape the moments away from activities of schedules.
Sometimes it takes the shape of competition; sometimes it is freedom from the containment of the place.

TRITONS

For many at this place, the spectators,
basketball is a mixture of agony, a chance to shake fists and
shout vindictives at opposing players and
referees;
and happiness:
Bruce just made
two more points.

For a skillful, well-coached few,
basketball means grueling practice sessions, a hard played game and, hopefully, a victory.

There are those possessing special skills in many sports
who seek to make a test of their abilities.
They demonstrate their skills on mats and hardwood floors, on orange clay infields and sand traps.
They compete and
sometimes
win.

For some a
serious undertaking,
for others a
comedy of errors;
a conglomeration of
glittering victories and ignominious defeats
mixed with skill and
humor.

They develop new skills,
exercise favorite
abilities,
or just have
fun.
For many men the exertion of intramurals is the best
relaxation.

For these, too,
intramurals are a chance to test their athletic ability.
They try the unfamiliar—
dribble, punt, and pass;
scream and yell, and try to win, but not really like boys.

They govern themselves,
to an extent,
under the Student Government Association.
Here faces meet and talk.
They seek to make the structure of government significant to the other faces and
shadows.
They conflict and talk
more;
they elect new
faces
and give money for the others to have their functions.
But still they are
blowers of smoke and pullers of hair.

They question and destroy and search and sometimes
rebuild their relationship to the faith
which gave birth to this place.

So many shadows doing so many things.
Those moments present themselves, the times of release and spontaneity,
and hold minds and eyes.
This place can be a happy place.

FLORIDA POWER CORPORATION

YOUR TAX-PAYING, INVESTOR-OWNED ELECTRIC COMPANY

Yes, they have come to this
place;

and it has been their
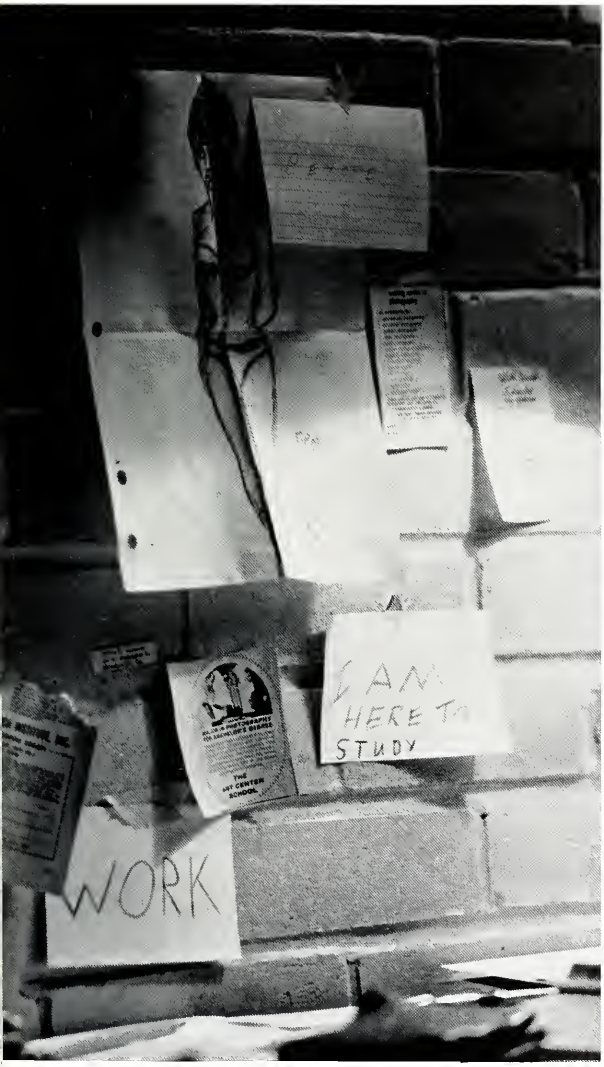
world;



I AM
STUDY

for many things.

And in the end they have the word . . . logos . . . committed to the memory of the printed page . . . hundreds of hours; hundreds of feet of film . . . seizing snatches of the year to stir memory in the years to come . . . logos . . . their word; your word.
